DOH ADVISORY

YOUR HEALTH DURING HAZE

Haze due to forest fire can cause air pollution, which can bring about increased risks for respiratory tract infections and cardiac ailments.

WAYS TO COPE WITH HAZE
The elderly, children, and those with respiratory (asthma COPD) and cardiovascular diseases should do the following:

- Stay indoors with good ventilation.
- Wear appropriate dust masks when going outside the house.
- Refrain from physical activities in heavily polluted areas.
- Exercise extreme caution when on the road to prevent accidents.
- Use headlights/fog lights.
- Follow the required minimum speed level and extreme caution in low visibility driving.
- Ensure that vehicle is in good running condition.
- Stay away from low-lying areas where smoke and suspended particles may settle.
- Tune in to the radio or television for more health advisories.

Consult a Doctor if there is:

- Difficulty in breathing
- Cough
- Chest pain
- Increased tearing of the eyes
- Nose or throat irritation
